

BLOOMSBURY BALLROOM

GENERAL INFORMATION

The Bloomsbury Ballroom is located within Victoria House, which is situated on Bloomsbury Square in Holborn

The Bloomsbury Ballroom, owned by Mean Fiddler founder Vince Power has at last been restored to its former glory. A breathtakingly impressive Ballroom built in the late 1920's, it is a Grade 11 listed venue complete with all the original features and a total capacity of 825. The space itself is reminiscent of the grand rooms where parties were held for London's 'bright young things' in the roaring twenties and where the deeply elegant characters of a Scott Fitzgerald novel might have revelled until the early hours.

Additionally the venue is furnished with a superb Art Deco bar as well as a long crush bar. These may be hired individually or together as required.

The main ballroom, which seats 300, offers a fully sprung floor, two storey high ceilings and an opulent stage area equipped with the latest high quality sound and lighting equipment. The room itself can easily be dressed to a particular theme, however untouched, remains extremely impressive with delicate hues of purple in the colour scheme offsetting the original chrome art deco filigree work throughout the room.

The Bloomsbury Ballroom is one of the most versatile spaces in London and now provides the backdrop for a variety of bespoke events at competitive hire fees. These can range from all types of corporate functions including conferences, catwalk shows, private parties, charity balls and award ceremonies to wedding receptions or even live musical performances. Auctions, art exhibitions and culinary and wine events would also compliment this regal venue.
