

CHINAWHITE

GENERAL INFORMATION

Chinawhite opened its doors in December 1998. A collaboration between friends, Chinawhite was developed by Rory Keegan, John Stephen and Patrice Gouty, three veterans of the International Entertainment Industry, whose collective experience is unparalleled.

Created by a design team led by Rory Keegan with architects Munkenbeck & Marshall & Satmoko Ball, Chinawhite features an elaborate and decadent tribute to the principals of Feng Shui. Guests enjoy an adventure as they explore the various rooms.

The oriental styles of Bali, Java and Sumatra are fused with a theatrical flair that owes much to the influences of ballet, theatre and film sets, creating a space that is dramatic and different, with startling use of colour and refreshingly new ideas. It offers a complete break from the bland minimalism, ubiquitous black box or marble clad venues of recent years.

The Main Room

The room naturally divides into four areas, the main bar, dance floor, a split-level Balinese seating area and a maze of curtain covered alcove hideaways. Dark and sultry in greens and aubergine, the room is warm and inviting with floors of dark teak and sandstone.

Wu Wu Room

Set slightly away from the main area of the club, this room is perfect as a retreat from the throbbing dance floor. It has its own bar and DJ. The blood red extravaganza, where half the room is laid up as a bed, strewn with wonderfully coloured rugs and silken cushions – amongst which nestle stone sculptures. Informal, intimate and relaxed.

Mao Room

Hidden at the back of the main room is the VIP area, which consists of 2 rooms – the largest The Mao Room, a gloss black temple to Mao Tse Tung. This room is strict and dramatic broken by vibrant Splashes of fuchsia pink. Wonderfully decadent.

The Octagon Room – VIP

Adjacent to the Mao Room is the 2nd VIP room – The Octagon Room. Presided over by a beautiful stone Buddha head, this incredibly intimate and exclusive tented jewel box of a room is suitable for 14 occupants.
