

GILGAMESH

GENERAL INFORMATION

Gilgamesh is the new arrival set to change the face of London. On June 1st 2006 Gilgamesh will open in the heart of Camden Town Stables Market and promises to offer a unique Eastern gastronomic and entertainment experience. Gilgamesh is a restaurant featuring a fully retractable roof, a bar, a lounge and a traditional tearoom all under one roof.

The Gilgamesh restaurant will be operated by none other than Ian Pengelley, formerly of Notting Hill's E&O and the critically acclaimed Pengelley's; and will serve an array of Pan-Asian culinary delights. The open kitchen facing the restaurant floor will mean that customers can expect to see culinary stunts from the chefs whilst they dine.

The restaurant boasts a 40ft high ceiling with a fully retractable roof. The floor to ceiling glass windows give the room an al fresco feel when the roof is completely retracted.

The lapis stone bar is one of the Gilgamesh main features and is handcrafted by the same Indian design team responsible for the stunning ancient Babylon interior style throughout the building. The bar's deep wooden base is covered with beautifully intricate hand carved bronzing depicting scenes of Babylon from the Gilgamesh period. Japanese chefs operate the sushi bar at one end where diners can perch for some of the best sushi and sashimi in London.

The Gilgamesh oriental tearoom will undoubtedly be a destination spot, offering traditional Asian teas complete with tea ceremonies and authentic Asian tea cakes. The low lounge seating coupled with the pure glass walls will entice diners to wile away an afternoon whilst overlooking the hubbub of Camden.

The Babylon Bar is Gilgamesh's VIP area, offering lounge seating, beautiful hanging chairs and its own separate circular bar area. There is also a merchandise shop onsite.
